HAMPSHIRE TOURISM BUSINESS SCORE DOUBLE SILVER AT NATIONAL INDUSTRY AWARDS

Hampshire's Lainston House Hotel and Portsmouth Information Service are both celebrating silver success at the annual Enjoy England Awards for Excellence held today in Brighton. A further five regional tourism businesses will carry off three silver and two gold awards.

The annual Awards, organised by national tourism body VisitEngland, are now in their 21st year and recognise the outstanding quality of some of the UK's very best tourism businesses. The winners lead their field in their commitment to the high quality and customer service that help make England a world-class destination.

Across the South East the diversity of tourism businesses is ever-increasing and provides both domestic and overseas visitors with a broad range of holiday, short break and day visit options. With the 'staycation' trend set to continue, the South East looks forward to a bumper spring season to boost the 2009 figures of 5.7m Brits choosing to holiday in the Beautiful South (a rise of 37% year on year).

To reach the final of the prestigious national Awards is affirmation of the standards that the region's top businesses have achieved. No other region had more finalists in the Awards than the South East with contenders from the Beautiful South featuring in no less than seven out of the 15 categories. All finalists were presented with their Awards by VisitEngland Chairman, Viscountess Cobham at the St George's Day ceremony held at the Brighton Dome today.

‘We’re absolutely delighted for all our winners’ said Mike Bedingfield, Chief Executive of Tourism South East, ‘and whole-heartedly congratulate Lainston House Hotel (Small Hotel of the Year) and Portsmouth Information Service (Tourist Information Service) on being awarded such a national accolade. Competition was tougher than ever this year with all tourism businesses striving to improve, so to walk away with an award is a real stamp of success. And it is made all the sweeter by taking place in our very own Brighton, one of England’s most successful and popular destinations.

The path to the national finals comes via Tourism South East’s regional awards and we’re already looking forward to the calibre and diversity of this year’s entrants. We are completely confident that the standard of our tourism businesses coupled with easy access are the key attractions for the ‘staycationing’ visitor.’

VisitEngland Chief Executive, James Berresford said: ‘The fantastic diversity and quality of tourism product across the length and breadth of England means we can compete confidently on the international stage, making this country a must-visit destination for Brits and overseas visitors’.
